Message #73: Rejected?

January 10, 2016

Sermon
Notes

16. How can we pray for each other this week?

Quotes to Ponder

The principle of grace is antithetical to that of works; if God has elected the individuals who make up the remnant “by grace,” it follows that He could not have elected them on the basis of works. The word “works” refers to anything that humans do.

Douglas Moo

Paul is saying that once we have come to see that salvation is by grace there is no longer any place for works. If works have any place at all, he is saying, then there is no point in speaking about grace....

If works of any kind, retrospective or prospective, come into it, then we no longer have grace. It is important to take grace seriously and not to let works creep in by some back door.

Leon Morris

God had made clear and specific promises to His chosen nation Israel. Some of those promises were conditional, dependent on Israel's obedience. But His greatest promises to His chosen people were unconditional and therefore were grounded solely in God's righteous integrity. Were God to fail in those promises, He would be less than righteous and just. He would be what God cannot be.

John MacArthur
